DSS: A VITAL COLLABORATION

Many Hartford Community Court defendants arrive at the court because their violation is driven by social need. A lack of resources, histories of substance abuse and mental health, unemployment and physical illness are just a few of the key issues they are facing. Although many qualify for the assistance and services they need, a large number are not connecting with that help on their own. For that reason, the Hartford Community Court cannot overstate the importance of our collaboration with the State Department of Social Services.

Under the partnership between DSS and the Hartford Community Court, DSS Eligibility Caseworker Tamara Collins works on-site at the court each Tuesday.

Ms. Collins meets with clients referred by the Court, DMHAS and the City of Hartford staff, who are in need of, and may qualify for, state services including food stamps, medical cards and other forms of assistance. Ms. Collins is connected by computer to the statewide DSS system and can determine a person's eligibility on-site. On average, Ms. Collins works with more than 30 people each month.

"Many of the people we work with have drug, alcohol and mental illnesses. That hinders their ability to get to service providers and be a good advocate for themselves, so having DSS on-site is a Godsend for us."

JEAN MCGOWAN OPULSKI RETIRES

The Hartford Community Court would like to wish a fond farewell to Jean McGowan Opulski, who retired from the Judicial Branch on October 31, 2013 after serving more than 30 years as a court reporter. Jean was a part of the Hartford Community Court team since 2003. In addition to her duties as the primary Community Court reporter, responsible for recording each day's court proceedings and preparing transcripts when requested, Jean often went above and beyond the call of duty getting involved to help in-need persons through food and clothing drives.

She was also active in charity walks to raise funds for cancer research. A renowned and respected professional singer, Jean also sang at many charity, holiday and memorial events.

"Jean was and is an important part of the Community Court family," Program Manager Chris Pleasanton said. "She was utterly professional in her work, did so many things to help others and is a dear friend to many of us. She is already missed."

AMTRAK SAFETY CLASS

In the summer of 2013, 638 people were arrested or summonsed to the Hartford Community Court for criminal behavior during the concert season at the Comcast Theater and the surrounding parking lots. Of those, 118 people were arrested or summonsed for criminal trespass by the Amtrak Police because they wandered into the adjacent rail yard and train tracks. In prior years, several people who wandered onto the railroad property have gotten seriously injured, including fatalities. Others have attempted to damage railcars that contained hazardous materials.

In an effort to educate people who trespass in the rail yard, the Amtrak Police have collaborated with the Hartford Community Court to offer defendants the Amtrak safety class at the court. Amtrak Police Officers Robert Hanson and Cliff Tucker conducted two sessions of the safety class at the court this past summer. They conveyed to participants the many dangers associated with trains and crossing onto railroad tracks through video presentations and discussions. Many of the participants expressed a new-found respect for the dangers of railroads in follow-up essays they were required to write after the class.

Because many of the trespassers in the rail yard were doing so to avoid long lines for the portable restrooms in the independent parking lots, Assistant State's Attorney Tom O'Brien reached out to the lot operators to ask if they would increase the number of facilities in their lots.

"Many people get into trouble, or are hurt, because they aren't thinking about the danger associated with their conduct.

We appreciate the Amtrak Police Department's willingness to work with us to educate people and keep them safe and out of trouble in the future."

STRIVE WEST HARTFORD VISIT

Students and teachers from West Hartford's STRIVE Program were welcome visitors to the Hartford Community Court on December 4. Nearly a dozen STRIVE students met with Judge Bradford Ward, Program Manager Chris Pleasanton, West Hartford Social Worker Joe Kalache and George Dillon of Community Health Services to learn about the community court and the justice system in Connecticut. They also learned about factors, including substance abuse and other illnesses that sometimes effect a person's involvement in criminal activity and how the court addresses those issues. The students then observed the court in session and had lunch with court staff.

The West Hartford STRIVE visit was the result of the longstanding collaboration between the Town of West Hartford Social Services Department and the Hartford Community Court. West Hartford provides the court with Social Worker Joe Kalache each Wednesday morning. Mr. Kalache interviews and assesses West Hartford defendants for their social services needs, makes referrals and follows up on their progress. Through this collaboration, Mr. Kalache worked with the court and STRIVE to arrange a visit to the court for the students so they could learn about criminal justice and the social services programs in their community. The student visit was made possible with funds West Hartford received from the Capitol Area Substance Abuse Council and distributes through the West Hartford Substance Abuse Council.

"West Hartford's STRIVE students were terrific visitors. They had excellent questions and shared some great insights about what they observed in court. We are looking forward to their visit next year."

CHS: THANKS-FOR-GIVING!

Community Health Services on Albany Avenue is a true community leader when it comes to helping people in Hartford. In addition to the outstanding medical, dental, pediatric, podiatric and behavioral and addiction health care provided by CHS, they go above and beyond to help Hartford residents in many other ways, including coat drives and dental clinics. CHS lived up to its reputation for helping people in need this Thanksgiving when it distributed 891 Thanksgiving turkeys with all the sides and fixings to in-need persons and families in Hartford.

The Hartford Community Court's Community Service Team was honored to help CHS with the Thanksgiving dinner distribution by sending four crews to CHS to assist. The community service defendants helped the CHS team distribute the food, carry the heavy bags of turkeys and food to the cars for elderly recipients and clean up the site afterwards.

"CHS did a beautiful thing by providing Thanksgiving food for so many people in Hartford. We were so pleased to help with this project and our crews really felt a sense of community by participating."

CHS HEALTH FAIR

In recognition of the 2013 National Health Center Week, on August 15 CHS held a massive outdoor health fair where local residents could connect with CHS services including blood pressure and HIV testing, eye-care and pediatric health care. People were also able to connect with other community service providers at the fair, including the MDC water cleanliness project and the Hartford Police and Fire Departments, among many others.

The Hartford Community Court sent several community service work crews, under the care of field supervisor Alice Gibbs and CPA Program Operations Director Deb Rogala, to assist with the event, helping to set up the tables, cleaning the area, and helping CHS representatives hand out free materials, including healthcare brochures and bottled water. The crews also helped break down and clean up at the conclusion of the event.

"CHS contributes a great deal to the Hartford Community Court in the form of George Dillon of the AMIR Program, David Weaver and Pat Miles of the CHS HIV Outreach and Education Program and Lisa Snipes, who provides information and small personal care items each week at the court," Program Manager Chris Pleasanton said. "We were very grateful for the opportunity to return help to CHS and thank them for all they do for us."

RESTITUTION

In some cases that come before the Hartford Community Court the defendant is alleged to have damaged property. Everything from broken windows, torn clothing and smashed yard fixtures to broken bicycles have been involved. As part of his offer to defendants in these cases, Assistant State's Attorney Tom O'Brien requires them to pay restitution to the victim, whose property was damaged. The restitution is paid through Bail Commissioner Tammy Niemann, who accepts a money order from the defendant and forwards the money order to the victim. Bail Commissioner Niemann and Attorney O'Brien track the cases in some of which the defendants make small monthly payments towards the restitution. In 2013 alone, over $25,000 in restitution has been forwarded through Bail Commissioner Niemann.

"Restitution is an important tool for me to directly help a victim in some cases," Attorney O'Brien said. "For a person on a fixed or limited income, especially, the only way I can make them whole is by requiring restitution from a defendant for the property they damaged."

"Bail Commissioner Niemann does an excellent job managing matters involving restitution. It goes a long way to helping people feel a sense of restoration."

A VISITOR FROM NEW ZEALAND

Since his retirement in 2009, the Hartford Community Court's original prosecutor, Glenn Kaas, has stayed active in the legal community first by lecturing on restorative courts and alternative justice at Trinity College in Dublin, Ireland and also through his wife Carolyn Wilkes Kaas, who is a professor at Quinnipiac School of Law. As such, he met Dr. Annabel Taylor, senior lecturer and director of postgraduate studies at the University of Canterbury of Christchurch, New Zealand. Dr. Taylor is participating in an exchange program at Quinnipiac until February and became interested in the Hartford Community Court after listening to Glenn speak of the model and his years at the court and he quickly arranged a visit.

Dr. Taylor, along with Quinnipiac Prof. Linda Meyer, met with Judge Robert F. McWeeny, Program Manager Chris Pleasanton, Community Service Program Manager Deborah Barrows, Community Service Field Supervisor Geoffrey Greene and Assistant State's Attorney Tom O'Brien to discuss various aspects of the Hartford Community Court. She then observed the first morning session of the court and toured the facility.

PLANTING A SEED IN HARTFORD

Many of the best projects at the Hartford Community Court are the result of teamwork and collaboration. The court's newest project is an example of that. When the community service team was brainstorming new initiatives, Supervising Judicial Marshal Frank Lucca suggested a community garden where defendants performing community service could plant, maintain and harvest the garden and the food could be donated to the community. Program Manager Deborah Barrows reached out to Knox Parks Foundation, who agreed to rent a sizable plot of land to the Community Court in their community garden located at Barbour and Earl Street in Hartford's North End.

In order to prepare the garden for next spring, Assistant State's Attorney Tom O'Brien, Program Manager Chris Pleasanton and Community Service Field Supervisor Alice Gibbs spent an afternoon tilling the soil and remove rocks from the planting area. Ms. Gibbs has taken responsibility for the project and will personally supervise the community service crews working in the garden. Mr. Lucca, a very experienced gardener, has offered to consult with the team on planting cycles and farming techniques.

"The community garden project has the added benefit of having defendants who work on it experience what it's like to plant a seed, work the land and see the results of their work grow, plus the good feeling they will have helping feed people in the city," Mr. Pleasanton said. "It goes to the heart of our mission: to help people rebuild a sense of community."

"This community garden project represents the best of what the Hartford Community Court is. It's about a team coming together with ideas and going beyond the routine of our jobs to help the people we work with at court and the community as a whole."

A FAMILY COMMITMENT TO SERVICE

As an Officer and Sergeant with the Farmington Police for over thirty years, Terrijean Erasmus has led a life committed to public service. Upon her retirement, Terrijean continued her commitment to serving others by furthering her education at Upper Iowa University and serving as an intern with the Hartford Community Court social services team. When interning at the Hartford Community Court, Terrijean works under the supervision of City of Hartford Caseworker Yanira Rodriguez, whom she helps interview and assess defendants for their social service needs, make referrals to appropriate services and monitor the progress of referrals.

Terrijean's commitment to public service also extends to her son, Lance Corporal James Rider, of the HMLA 167 USMC Airframes. We are happy to report Lance Corporal Rider, a Marine since 2010, recently returned home safely after a six-month deployment in Afghanistan.

"We would like to thank Terrijean for her outstanding work as an intern with the Hartford Community Court and thank her son, Lance Corporal Rider, for his service to our country. Welcome home, James!"

MAACM

Chris Pleasanton was an invited panelist at the 2013 Mid-Atlantic Association of Court Managers Annual Meeting in Atlantic City, NJ on September 30. The conference was attended by judges and court administrators from across the region from New York to Georgia. Mr. Pleasanton served on a panel discussing the community court model along with Danielle Malingone of The Center for Court Innovation (New York), Jethro Antoine of Newark Community Court (New Jersey) and Dan Cipullo of the Washington D.C Courts system. The panel was moderated by Marianne Kennedy of Delaware.

CAPE VERDE JUDICIAL DELEGATION VISIT

The Hartford Community Court was pleased to host a visit by judicial administrators from Cape Verde on October 10. The Cape Verde delegation, guests of Supreme Court Justice Lubbie Harper, Jr., visited several state and federal courts in both Connecticut and New York to examine judicial concepts to bring back to their nation's judicial system.

While at the Hartford Community Court, the Cape Verde delegation met with Hon. Bradford Ward, Program Manager Chris Pleasanton, Assistant State's Attorney Tom O'Brien, Public Defender Jon Newman, City of Hartford Caseworker Yanira Rodriguez and Community Service Program Manager Deborah Barrows, who each explained their roles at the community court. The delegation was then able to observe the court in session.

ELIZABETH ROSA NAMED CREW LEADER

The Hartford Community Court and Community Partner's in Action are proud to announce Elizabeth Rosa has been selected to be the new crew leader for the court's community service team. Ms. Rosa has previously served as a community service field supervisor, working with defendant work crews on projects throughout Hartford. Prior to joining the community service team, Ms. Rosa worked for Community Solutions for more than nine years, earning several promotions, eventually serving as a shift supervisor. She also volunteers with East Hartford's Community Emergency Response Team where she assists in times of crisis such as hurricanes.

In her position as crew leader, Ms. Rosa will be responsible for supervising the five field supervisors, working with them to ensure scheduled projects are completed, troubleshooting any on-site problems and maintaining defendant attendance reports for the court. She also works with the Court and CPA Program Manager Deborah Barrows to reach out to residents and community groups to develop new community service projects that will have a positive impact on our neighborhoods. In Ms. Barrow's absence, Ms. Rosa will be in charge of the community service team.

"Elizabeth has continually taken the initiative to learn each aspect of the community service team's operations," Ms. Barrows said. "I feel confident in having her represent the court and the community service program in my absence."

MARYSOL NARVAEZ JOINS COM SERVICE

The Hartford Community Court would like to welcome Marysol Narvaez to the court's Community Service Team. Marysol was recently hired as an administrative assistant by Community Partners in Action. Her duties will include signing defendants up for community service after their court appearance, which also includes going over the expectations and requirements of community service with them, working with CPA Program Manager Deborah Barrows and Crew Leader Elizabeth Rosa to manage the day-to-day operations of the community service program, assisting in the compilation of statistics and reports and other general office duties. Her bilingual abilities will also help the team to communicate more effectively with a wider range of defendants.

Marysol was born and raised in Hartford. She and her husband Marcus are raising four children; Alexandra, Amaryllis, Analise and Elias.

"Marysol has shown herself to be a great addition to the Community Court team. Her work is top notch; she treats people with respect and she is willing to go above and beyond to help others."
