Introduction

A Guide to Resources in the Law Library

- Modification: “a modification is defined as ‘[a] change; an alteration or amendment which introduces new elements into the details, or cancels some of them, but leaves the general purpose and effect of the subject-matter intact.’ Black’s Law Dictionary (6th Ed. 1990).” Silver v. Silver, 200 Conn. App. 505, 516, 238 A.3d 823, cert. denied 335 Conn. 973 (2020).
- Modification of support: “any final order for the periodic payment of permanent alimony or support, an order for alimony or support pendente lite or an order requiring either party to maintain life insurance for the other party or a minor child of the parties may, at any time thereafter, be continued, set aside, altered or modified by the court upon a showing of a substantial change in the circumstances of either party or upon a showing that the final order for child support substantially deviates from the child support guidelines . . . .” Conn. Gen. Stat. § 46b-86(a) (2023).
- “...alimony typically is modifiable, while dispositions of marital property are not.” Dombrowski v. Noyes-Dombrowski, 273 Conn. 127, 133, 869 A.2d 164 (2005).
- Modification of Custody: “means a child custody determination that changes, replaces, supersedes or is otherwise made after a previous determination concerning the same child, whether or not it is made by the court that made the prior custody determination.” Conn. Gen. Stat. § 46b-115a(11) (2023).
- Modification of child custody and visitation standard: “In making or modifying any order as provided in subsection (a) of this section, the rights and responsibilities of both parents shall be considered and the court shall enter orders accordingly that serve the best interests of the child and provide the child with the active and consistent involvement of both parents commensurate with their abilities and interests.” Conn. Gen. Stats. § 46b-56(b) (2023).
- “In ruling on a motion to modify visitation, the court is not required to find as a threshold matter that a change in circumstances has occurred. Szczerkowski v. Karmelowicz, 60 Conn. App. 429, 433, 759 A.2d 1050 (2000); see also McGinty v. McGinty, 66 Conn. App. 35, 40, 783 A.2d 1170 (2001). Instead, ‘[i]n modifying an order concerning visitation, the trial court shall “be guided by the best interests of the child....” General Statutes § 46b-56 (b).’ Kelly v. Kelly, 54 Conn. App. 50, 57, 732 A.2d 808 (1999);” Balaska v. Balaska, 130 Conn. App. 510, 515-16, 25 A.3d 680 (2011).

Section 1: Modification of Alimony

A Guide to Resources in the Law Library

SCOPE: Bibliographic resources relating to the grounds and procedures for modifying alimony in Connecticut.

DEFINITION:

- Cohabitation: "Section 46b-86 (b), known as the 'cohabitation statute,' provides in pertinent part that a court may 'modify such judgment and suspend, reduce or terminate the payment of periodic alimony upon a showing that the party receiving the periodic alimony is living with another person under circumstances which the court finds should result in the modification . . . of alimony because the living arrangements cause such a change of circumstances as to alter the financial needs of that party.'" D'Ascanio v. D'Ascanio, 237 Conn. 481, 485-486, 678 A.2d 469 (1996).
- Substantial change in circumstances: "'It is ... well established that when a party, pursuant to § 46b-86, seeks a postjudgment modification of a dissolution decree . . . he or she must demonstrate that a substantial change in circumstances has arisen subsequent to the entry of the [decree].'" Borkowski v. Borkowski, 228 Conn. 729, 736, 638 A.2d 1060 (1994). 'Once a trial court determines that there has been a substantial change in the financial circumstances of one of the parties, the same criteria that determine an initial award of alimony . . . are relevant to the question of modification.'" Dan v. Dan, 315 Conn. 1, 8-9, 105 A.3d 118 (2014).
- To obtain a modification, the moving party must demonstrate that circumstances have changed since the last court order such that it would be unjust or inequitable to hold either party to it. Borkowski v. Borkowski, 228 Conn. 729, 737-38, 638 A.2d 1060 (1994).
- Burden of Proof: Under that statutory provision, the party seeking the modification bears the burden of demonstrating that such a change has occurred. Borkowski v. Borkowski, 228 Conn. 729, 734, 638 A.2d 1060 (1994).
- Decree or order of the court: "Thus, even if the parties had agreed that the defendant would not be obligated to comply with the alimony order, that agreement would not be effective to modify the defendant's obligation because, as previously stated, '[d]ecrees in a dissolution action cannot be modified by acts of the parties without further decree or order by the court.'" Albrecht v. Albrecht, 19 Conn. App. 146, 151, 562 A.2d 528, cert. denied, 212 Conn. 813, 565 A.2d 534 (1989)." Ford v. Ford, 72 Conn. App. 137, 141, 804 A.2d 215 (2002).

- Ross v. Ross, 200 Conn. App. 720, 738, 239 A.3d 1280 (2020). “For the foregoing reasons, we conclude that the court erred in modifying the unallocated alimony and child support award without unbundling the child support award from the alimony award, and, further, erred in failing to consider and to apply the child support guidelines or the principles espoused therein.”
- Marshall v. Marshall, 200 Conn. App. 688, 719, 241 A.3d 189 (2020). “Separately, the court found that the plaintiff had established a substantial change in circumstances, and it modified his alimony obligation, reducing it to zero, retroactive to September 1, 2011. Because the plaintiff's motion to modify was served on the defendant on August 31, 2011, the court's alimony modification retroactive to September 1, 2011, did not violate § 46b-86.”
- Budrawich v. Budrawich, 200 Conn. App. 229, 240 A.3d 688 (2020). “This court previously has construed certain language contained in a separation agreement to relieve the party seeking to modify alimony of the statutorily mandated burden of demonstrating that a substantial change in circumstances has occurred. See Steller v. Steller, supra, 181 Conn. App. at 584, 584-85 n.1, 187 A.3d 1184; Taylor v. Taylor, 117 Conn. App. 229, 231, 978 A.2d 538, cert. denied, 294 Conn. 915, 983 A.2d 852 (2009).”
- Halperin v. Halperin, 196 Conn. App. 603, 622, 230 A.3d 757 (2020). The plaintiff next argues that his interests in CSCE and ISOI were purchased using cash assets awarded to him at the time of the dissolution and, therefore, the income received from his investment of the cash assets ‘should not be redistributed yet again.’ In support of his argument, he cites Gay v. Gay, 266 Conn. 641, 835 A.2d 1 (2003), Schorsch v. Schorsch, 53 Conn. App. 378, 731 A.2d 330 (1999), and Denley v. Denley, 38 Conn. App. 349, 661 A.2d 628 (1995), a line of cases that he concedes is ‘factually distinguishable’ but that he suggests evidences a ‘modern trend’ in our courts of reluctance to ‘designate as income for purposes of support, funds received as a result of the conversion of assets awarded at the time of the dissolution.’ The defendant responds that ‘[t]he plaintiff's argument confuses an award of assets with a support award based on the income stream derived from an asset.’ We agree with the defendant.”
- Nappo v. Nappo, 188 Conn. App. 574, 591, 205 A.3d 723 (2019). The court was correct in considering the income of the defendant's current wife because it was relevant to his current expenses, a material factor in determining his current net income and, therefore, his ability to pay the increased alimony. See McGuinness v. McGuinness, 185 Conn. 7, 12-13, 440 A.2d 804 (1981).

- Peixoto v. Peixoto, 185 Conn. App. 272, 283, 196 A.3d 1229 (2018). “In Dan, our Supreme Court held that it was permissible for a court to order an upward modification of alimony on the basis of an increase in the payor's income if either: (1) the initial alimony award was insufficient to fulfill the underlying purpose of alimony; or (2) the court finds that other exceptional circumstances exist. Dan v. Dan, supra, 315 Conn. 15-17. Although the purpose of the alimony award ordered by the dissolution court may be unclear from the record, what is clear is that Judge Colin, after an evidentiary hearing, a review of the dissolution transcript and decision, and in full consideration of Dan, found that exceptional circumstances exist in this case that warrant a modification of the alimony award. We find no abuse of discretion in that conclusion. On the basis of the foregoing, we conclude that the defendant's claim that the trial court acted in contravention of the standard and the holding established by our Supreme Court in Dan, thus, is unavailing. The judgment is affirmed.”
- Cohen v. Cohen, 327 Conn. 485, 499, 176 A.3d 92 (2017). “As we recognized in Dan, however, ‘it is well established that an increase of the paying spouse, standing alone, is sufficient to justify reconsideration, of a prior alimony order pursuant to § 46b-86 . . . .’ (Citation omitted; emphasis in original.) Id., 9. In other words, a party seeking modification of an alimony award need only claim in the motion for modification that there has been a substantial change in circumstances to warrant reconsideration. We have never required a party seeking modification to cite in the motion for modification itself all of the reasons why the substantial change in circumstances justifies a modification or the case law supporting the motion.”
- Ceddia v. Ceddia, 164 Conn. App. 266, 274, 137 A.3d 830, 834 (2016). “When the parties wished to preclude one aspect of possible periodic alimony modification, they knew how to do so. Their marital dissolution agreement specifically stated that the alimony was nonmodifiable as to duration. However, the parties were silent as to any similar restriction on any later modifications as to the amount of periodic alimony. That omission leads us to the conclusion that it was not barred by the marital dissolution agreement or the judgment of dissolution that incorporated the agreement's terms. We therefore reject this waiver claim.”
- Dan v. Dan, 315 Conn. 1, 11-15, 105 A.3d 118 (2014). “There is little, if any, legal or logical support, however, for the proposition that a legitimate purpose of alimony is to allow the supported spouse's standard of living to match the supporting spouse's standard of living after the divorce, when the supported spouse is no longer contributing to the supporting spouse's income earning efforts. Rather, the weight of authority is to the contrary. We are persuaded by the reasoning of these cases, namely, that, when the amount of the original alimony award was and continues to be sufficient to fulfill the purpose of the award, whether that purpose was to maintain permanently the standard of living of the supported spouse at the level that he or she enjoyed during the marriage or to provide temporary support in order to allow the supported spouse to become self-sufficient, an increase in the income of the supporting spouse, standing alone, is not a sufficient justification to modify an alimony award. In short, when the sole change in circumstances is an increase in the income of the supporting spouse, and when the initial award was and continues to be sufficient to fulfill the intended purpose of that award, we can conceive of no reason why the supported spouse, whose marriage to the supporting spouse has ended and who no longer contributes anything to the supporting spouse's income earning efforts, should be entitled to share in an improved standard of living that is solely the result of the supporting spouse's efforts."

- Lynch v. Lynch, 153 Conn. App. 208, 211, 100 A.3d 968 (2014), cert. denied, 315 Conn. 923, 108 A.3d 1124, cert. denied, 577 U.S. 839, 136 S. Ct. 68, 193 L. Ed. 2d 66 (2015). "The plaintiff specifically claims that the court improperly (1) awarded alimony to the defendant, Laurie Lynch, and not to him; (2) denied his request for equitable financial relief in his motion for modification, even though he had met his burden of establishing a substantial change in circumstances; (3) granted the defendant's October 11, 2012 motion for contempt; (4) granted the defendant's May 1, 2013 post judgment motion for contempt; (5) calculated the reimbursement for stipulated shared household expenses owed to him by the defendant; (6) failed to calculate a pendente lite arrearage owed to him by the defendant; (7) awarded $7500 in appellate attorney's fees to the defendant; (8) entered financial orders that were inequitable to him and that demonstrated the court's bias against him; and (9) failed to hear certain of his motions and denied others without consideration of his due process rights. We disagree with all nine of the plaintiff's claims and affirm the judgment of the trial court."
- Olson v. Mohammadu, 310 Conn. 665, 666, 81 A.3d 215 (2013). "...a court that is confronted with a motion for modification under § 46b-86 (a) must first determine whether the moving party has established a substantial change in circumstances, and in making that threshold determination, if a party's voluntary action gave rise to the substantial change in circumstances warranting modification, the court must assess the motivations underlying the voluntary conduct to determine whether there is culpable conduct foreclosing the threshold determination of a substantial change in circumstances, and, if the court finds such a substantial change in circumstances, the court may determine what modification, if any, is appropriate."

- Von Kohorn v. Von Kohorn, 132 Conn. App. 709, 716, 33 A.3d 809 (2011). "The court, by granting the plaintiff's request for clarification, lacked the authority to alter the substantive terms of the prior judgment beyond those terms that it determined were omitted from the original order. See Mickey v. Mickey, supra, 292 Conn. at 604–605, 974 A.2d 641. It also lacked any authority to make substantive changes pursuant to General Statutes § 52-212a or Practice Book §§ 17-4 and 11-11 because the court did not grant reargument of the terms of the alimony orders, and the court reasonably could not have treated the plaintiff's post-judgment motion as a motion to open the judgment and modify the alimony award because such relief was neither directly nor implicitly requested in the postjudgment motion."
- Lehan v. Lehan, 118 Conn. App. 685, 696, 985 A.2d 378 (2010). "For purposes of § 46b-86(b), the plaintiff must demonstrate that the defendant's financial needs, as quantified by the court in setting the alimony award pursuant to General Statutes § 46b-82, have been altered by her living arrangements. See id., at 324, 951 A.2d 587. 'Although the alteration need not be substantial ... the difference must be measurable in some way before the court can conclude whether a difference, in fact, exists.... In other words, the court must have the ability to compare the [defendant's] financial needs at different points in time in order to determine whether those needs either have increased or have decreased over time.'"
- Ucci v. Ucci, 114 Conn. App. 256, 261, 969 A.2d 217 (2009). "Although the defendant's motion for modification included the language of the modification provision of the separation agreement, as well as the substantial circumstances language of the statute, the defendant did not alert the court at any time that he sought modification pursuant to the agreement only and that the court could not consider the statutory criteria of § 46b-82."
- Simms v. Simms, 283 Conn. 494, 502-503, 927 A.2d 894 (2007). "[Section] 46b-86 governs the modification or termination of an alimony or support order after the date of a dissolution judgment. When, as in this case, the disputed issue is alimony, the applicable provision of the statute is § 46b-86 (a), which provides that a final order for alimony may be modified by the trial court upon a showing of a substantial change in the circumstances of either party. . . . Under that statutory provision, the party seeking the modification bears the burden of demonstrating that such a change has occurred. . . . Because a request for termination of alimony is, in effect, a request for a modification, this court has treated as identical motions to modify and motions to terminate brought under § 46b-86 (a). . . ." \[Borkowski v. Borkowski, 228 Conn. 729, 734-735 (1994).]

- Doody v. Doody, No. FA 02-0731061 (Conn. Super. Ct., Hartford J.D., May 17, 2005). "However, a defendant's inability to pay 'does not automatically entitle a party to a decrease of an alimony order.' Sanchione v. Sanchione 173 Conn. 397 (1977). Such inability to pay must be excusable and not brought about by the defendant's own fault before a motion for modification may be granted. Wanatowitz v. Wanatowitz. [sic] 12 Conn. App. 616 (1987); Gleason v. Gleason, 16 Conn. App. 134 (1988)."
- Talbot v. Talbot, 148 Conn. App. 279, 287 (2014). "The plaintiff's attested net annual income at the time of the dissolution of judgment was $245,000; his attested net (and gross) annual income in June, 2012, was $204,108—or approximately 17 percent less. We conclude that this evidence demonstrates that the court acted within in its discretion when it determined that the plaintiff's reduction in income and his illness did not necessitate a finding of a substantial change in circumstances." (p.46)

"We do not mean to imply that a 17 percent reduction in net income could not be a substantial change in circumstances in all cases. Each case must be considered on its own facts." (Fn. 6)

- Simms v. Simms, 89 Conn. App. 158, 162 (2005). "The defendant's claim that the self-executing alimony alterations constitute modifications of the dissolution orders is untenable. Those alterations were required not by a subsequent court order or adjudication by the court, but rather by the express terms of the settlement agreement incorporated into the 1979 dissolution orders. This court has held that '[d]ecrees in a dissolution action cannot be modified by acts of the parties without further decree or order by the court.' Albrecht v. Albrecht, 19 Conn. App. 146, 151, 562 A.2d 528, cert. denied, 212 Conn. 813, 565 A.2d 534 (1989). The record reveals no further decree or order by the court since 1979."
- Gay v. Gay, 266 Conn. 641, 647-648, 835 A.2d 1 (2003). "[T]he purpose of both periodic and lump sum alimony is to provide continuing support." Smith v. Smith, 249 Conn. 265, 275, 752 A.2d 1023(1999). At least where, as is generally the case, capital gains do not represent a steady stream of revenue, the fact that a party has enjoyed such gains in a particular year does not provide a court with an adequate basis for assessing that party's long-term financial needs or resources. For this reason, we conclude that capital gains are not income for purposes of modification of an order for continuing financial support if those gains do not constitute a steady stream of revenue. This is true without regard to whether the assets from which those gains are derived were acquired before or after the dissolution. There is nothing in the record to suggest that the plaintiff can, through the ongoing sale of capital assets, maintain the income stream found by the trial court. Accordingly, we conclude that, regardless of when the capital assets sold by the plaintiff were acquired, the gains on the assets were not income." (Emphasis added.)

- Distefano v. Distefano, 67 Conn. App. 628, 633, 787 A.2d 675 (2002). "In accordance with General Statutes § 46b-86 (b) and the holding in DeMaria, before the payment of alimony can be modified or terminated, two requirements must be established. First, it must be shown that the party receiving the alimony is cohabitating with another individual. If it is proven that there is cohabitation, the party seeking to alter the terms of the alimony payments must then establish that the recipient's financial needs have been altered as a result of the cohabitation."
- Clark v. Clark, 66 Conn. App. 657, 665, 785 A.2d 1162 (2001). "The court is not required, however, to consider all of the § 46b-82 criteria when modification of alimony is sought pursuant to a dissolution agreement."
- Grosso v. Grosso, 59 Conn. App. 628, 634, 758 A.2d 367 (2000). "In the present case, however, the defendant moved to modify the alimony payments pursuant to § 46-86 (a). The court fashioned a remedy for the defendant's changed circumstances in a way contemplated by subsection (a). Accordingly, we find that the court acted properly and did not abuse its discretion in suspending the alimony payments."
- Way v. Way, 60 Conn. App. 189, 194, 758 A.2d 884 (2000). "When a decree contains language precluding modification, a trial court, under its continuing jurisdiction, has the power to determine whether the preclusive language in the decree should be enforced."

"Because, however, 'living with another' person without financial benefit did not establish sufficient reason to refashion an award of alimony under General Statutes § 46b-81, the legislature imposed the additional requirement that the party making alimony payments prove that the living arrangement has resulted in a change in circumstances that alters the financial needs of the alimony recipient. Therefore, this additional requirement, in effect, serves as a limitation. Pursuant to § 46b-86 (b), the nonmarital union must be one with attendant financial consequences before the trial court may alter an award of alimony."
- Borkowski v. Borkowski, 228 Conn. 729, 736, 638 A.2d 1060 (1994). "In general the same sorts of [criteria] are relevant in deciding whether the decree may be modified as are relevant in making the initial award of alimony. They have chiefly to do with the needs and financial resources of the parties. . . .

More specifically, these criteria, outlined in General Statutes 46b-82, require the court to consider the needs and financial resources of each of the parties and their children, as well as such factors as the causes for the dissolution of the marriage and the age, health, station, occupation, employability and amount and sources of income of the parties."

| "When the initial award was not sufficient to fulfill the underlying purpose of the award, however, an increase in the supporting spouse's salary, in and of itself, may justify an increase in the award. For example, if the initial alimony award was not sufficient to maintain the standard of living that the supported spouse had enjoyed during the marriage because the award was based on a reduction in the supporting spouse's income due to unemployment or underemployment as a result of an economic downturn, and, after the divorce, the supporting spouse's income returns to its previous level, a modification might well be justified." Dan v. ## Section 2: Modification of Child Support

A Guide to Resources in the Law Library

SCOPE: Bibliographic resources relating to modification of support including grounds but excluding IV-D child support cases.

DEFINITIONS:

- Modification of child support: “any final order for the periodic payment of permanent alimony or support, an order for alimony or support pendente lite or an order requiring either party to maintain life insurance for the other party or a minor child of the parties may, at any time thereafter, be continued, set aside, altered or modified by the court upon a showing of a substantial change in the circumstances of either party or upon a showing that the final order for child support substantially deviates from the child support guidelines. . . .” Conn. Gen. Stat. § 46b-86 (a).
- Burden of Proof: The plaintiff bore the burden of persuading the court that his circumstances had changed substantially... (“[t]he party seeking modification bears the burden of showing the existence of a substantial change in the circumstances” Bolat v. - [De Almeida-Kennedy v. Kennedy, 224 Conn. App. 19, 34, 312 A.3d 150 (2024). "On the basis of the wholly undisputed evidence in the record, we are persuaded that the change in residence of the parties' older child from the home of the plaintiff to the home of the defendant amounted to a substantial change in circumstances, and the court's finding to the contrary is not supported by the evidence. The proper remedy is for this court to reverse the judgment in part and remand the case for a new hearing on the motion for modification of the child support component of the defendant's unallocated support obligation as set forth in the 2014 agreement."
- Righi v. Righi, 172 Conn. App. 427, 434, 160 A.3d 1094 (2017). "The court granted the defendant's motion to modify on the basis of the second modification criteria, that there was a substantial deviation from the child support guidelines without the requisite specific finding that application of the guidelines would be inequitable or inappropriate. Under these circumstances, it was not necessary for the court to find first that there had been a change in circumstances before granting the defendant's motion to modify."
- LeSueur v. LeSueur, 172 Conn. App. 767, 779, 162 A.3d 32 (2017). "For the foregoing reasons, we conclude that the court did not abuse its discretion in modifying the defendant's child support obligation to December 9, 2014, rather than to July 14, 2014, because it reasonably determined that December 9, 2014 was the proper date given that as of that date the primary physical custody of the daughter 'was no longer temporary.' (Emphasis added.)"

"Although there is no bright line test for determining the date of retroactivity of child support payments, this court has set forth factors that may be considered."

- Gabriel v. Gabriel, 324 Conn. 324, 332, 152 A.3d 1230 (2016). "Specifically, the plaintiff asserted that 'the financial circumstances of the parties have changed as a result of the defendant's relocation. [The defendant] no longer has primary residential custody of the children and is no longer primarily responsible for their financial needs. The [plaintiff] now has custody and primary responsibility for all three minor children.' Both the trial court and the Appellate Court concluded that the plaintiff's filing of the motion for modification triggered § 46b-224. Gabriel v. Gabriel, supra, 159 Conn. App. at 820-21, 123 A.3d 453. We agree." (p. 332)

"[I]n order to address the plaintiff's motion for modification, it was necessary for the trial court to know how much of the original award of unallocated alimony and support was attributed to child support. Because the court that issued the original support order did not make such a finding, the trial court was required to make that determination before ruling on the motion for modification. . . . On remand, the trial court should conduct a hearing to determine, based on evidence presented by the parties, the specific amount of child support required at the time the defendant had primary physical custody of the parties' children." (p. 340)

- McKeon v. Lennon, 321 Conn. 323, 336, 138 A.3d 242 (2016). "We therefore conclude, in light of the different purposes of alimony and child support, that the Appellate Court improperly relied on Dan in determining that 'both alimony and child support orders are subject to the same modification requirements under § 46b-86 (a)'; McKeon v. Lennon, supra, 155 Conn. App. at 434, 109 A.3d 986; and that the court improperly concluded that the plaintiff was required to show additional circumstances, beyond the increase in the defendant's income, to justify modification of the child support award."
- Malpeso v. Malpeso, 165 Conn. App. 151, 176-177, 138 A.3d 1069 (2016). "Section 46b-86 (a) provides in relevant part: 'No order for periodic payment of permanent alimony or support may be subject to retroactive modification, except that the court may order modification with respect to any period during which there is a pending motion for modification of an alimony or support order from the date of service of notice of such pending motion upon the opposing party....' (Emphasis added.) Therefore, notwithstanding the general rule that in Connecticut, absent an agreement, a parent's obligation to support a child ends at the age of majority, the party seeking to terminate such obligation must file a motion with the court."
- Farmassony v. Farmassony, 164 Conn. App. 665, 672-673, 138 A.3d 417 (2016). "The child support award, as defined in the child support and arrearage guidelines, § 46b-215a-1 of the Regulations of Connecticut State Agencies, and in the parties' separation agreement, includes child care costs. Thus, the entirety of the order of child support, including its provisions for the payment of child care costs, is part of the order for support. Therefore, § 46b-86 (a) bars any retroactive modification of the order of child care costs because it is an integral part of the overall order of support. Accordingly, we reverse the order of the trial court for retroactive repayment of the child care costs."

- Vincent v. Vincent, Superior Court, Judicial District of Fairfield at Bridgeport, No. FBT-FA12-4041710-S (April 26, 2016) (2016 WL 2891285) (2016 Conn. Super. LEXIS 399). "There are a number of cases in which a motion for modification of support has been denied, despite a substantial change in circumstances, when the moving party's culpable conduct formed the sole basis of the substantial change in circumstances. In Sanchione v. Sanchione, 173 Conn. 397, 407, 378 A.2d 522 (1977), the court held that culpable conduct precludes a threshold showing of a substantial change in circumstances. 'Nearly every human action is voluntary, but not every voluntary action is fault worthy. The words used by this court in Sanchione—"fault . . . extravagance, neglect, misconduct or other unacceptable reason"—underscore that the crux of the inquiry is culpability and not voluntariness. . . . The nationale [sic] in Sanchione was recently affirmed in Olson. The court held that if: 'a party's voluntary action gives rise to the alleged substantial change in circumstances warranting modification, the court must assess the motivations underlying the voluntary conduct in order to determine whether there is culpable conduct foreclosing a threshold determination of a substantial change in circumstances.' Olson at 684."
- Collin v. Collin, Superior Court, Judicial District of Windham at Putnam, No. WWM-FA10-4010129-S (February 4, 2016) (61 Conn. L. Rptr. 798, 800) (2016 WL 888066) (2016 Conn. Super. LEXIS 332). "In determining the question on appeal as to whether the children's social security dependency benefits, which are independent of the defendant's social security disability payments, should be used to pay the defendant's child support order including any arrearage that accrued between June 2012 and December 2014, the cases of Jenkins v. Jenkins, 243 Conn. 584, 704 A.2d 231(1998) and Tarbox v. Tarbox, 84 Conn. App. 403, 853 A.2d 614 (2004), are instructive."
- "Although divergent decisions exist on this subject not only in our trial courts...our appellate courts have not provided authority for this court to conclude that the defendant is entitled to use the children's dependency benefits as a credit or reimbursement against her arrearage. Our appellate court cases, however, have said that the amount of children's dependency benefits should be included in the gross income of the noncustodial parent as earnings of the contributing parent for purposes of determining the amount of that parent's child support obligation under the guidelines. In addition, our courts have stated that the noncustodial parent should file a motion for modification of the child support obligation reflecting a change in financial circumstances, a procedure consistent with § 46b-86(a)."

- Coury v. Coury, 161 Conn. App. 271, 294-295, 128 A.3d 517 (2015). “The defendant’s child support obligation to the plaintiff was suspended by operation of law pursuant to General Statutes § 46b-224 when the court transferred sole physical custody of the parties’ three minor children to him. Extending Shedrick to the facts of this case, and prohibiting the court from retroactively modifying the child support portion of the unallocated support award would conflict with § 46b-224, which requires modification of a child support order, or the child support portion of an unallocated support order, from the moment that a court transfers custody of minor children from a recipient of child support to a payor of child support. See Tomlinson v. Tomlinson, 305 Conn. 539, 552, 557, 46 A.3d 112 (2012) (noting that § 46b-224 operates to require modification of child support order and holding that child support portion of unallocated support order was modifiable despite provision in parties’ separation agreement prohibiting modification).”
- Fulton v. Fulton, 156 Conn. App. 739, 749, 116 A.3d 311 (2015). “The parties and the court are entitled to rely on the financial affidavits submitted at the time of the dissolution, which are presumed to be reliable for that purpose. If, however, a party makes a preliminary showing that an affidavit submitted at the time of the dissolution was inaccurate, that the error was not intentional or misleading to the court or another party, and that it would thus be inequitable to rely only on the mistaken information, a postdissolution court may consider factors other than the financial affidavit in deciding whether there has been a substantial change of circumstances.”
- Fox v. Fox, 152 Conn. App. 611, 621, 99 A.3d 1206 (2014). “Thus, [w]hen presented with a motion for modification, a court must first determine whether there has been a substantial change in the financial circumstances of one or both of the parties.... alleged substantial change in circumstances warranting modification, the court must assess the motivations underlying the voluntary conduct in order to determine whether there is culpable conduct foreclosing a threshold determination of a substantial change in circumstances. - Tanzman v. Meurer, 309 Conn. 105, 117-118, 70 A.3d 13 (2013). "As the present case shows, the failure to specify the dollar amount of the earning capacity leaves the relevant party in doubt as to what is expected from him or her, and makes it extremely difficult, if not impossible, both for a reviewing court to determine the reasonableness of the financial award and for the trial court in a subsequent proceeding on a motion for modification to determine whether there has been a substantial change in circumstances. We therefore conclude, pursuant to our inherent supervisory authority, that, when a trial court has based a financial award pursuant to § 46b-82 or § 46b-86 on a party's earning capacity, the court must determine the specific dollar amount of the party's earning capacity. We further conclude that, because the trial court in the present case could not reasonably have concluded that there had been no substantial change in the plaintiff's earning capacity between the time of the original financial award and the motion for modification without ever having determined the plaintiff's specific earning capacity, the trial court abused its discretion when it denied the motion for modification. Finally, we conclude that the remedy when the trial court has indicated that it failed to determine the specific amount of a party's earning capacity at the time of the original financial award is for the trial court to conduct a new hearing on the issue."

The first allows the court to modify a support order when the financial circumstances of the individual parties have changed, regardless of their prior contemplation of such changes. The second allows the court to modify child support orders that were once deemed appropriate but no longer seem equitable in the light of changed social or economic circumstances in the society as a whole, as reflected in the mandatory periodic revisions of the child support guidelines. See General Statutes 46b-215a. In light of the similar purposes and language of these provisions, we conclude that the legislature intended both provisions to be applicable to orders entered before the provisions became law." Turner v. While the legislature was considering a bill that would establish a standard by which a court could determine what degree of deviation from the child support guidelines might be considered 'substantial,' an attorney for a legal services organization informed the Judiciary Committee that trial courts had construed P.A. 90-188 to preclude its retrospective application to orders entered before the effective date of the act. See Conn. Joint Standing Committee Hearings, Judiciary, March 22, 1991, pp. 888-89, remarks of Amy Eppler-Epstein. [fn10] The legislature subsequently enacted Public Acts 1991, No. 91-76, 1 (P.A. 91-76), which added the following provisions to General Statutes 46b-86 immediately following the text that had been added by P.A. 90-188: 'There shall be a rebuttable presumption that any deviation of less than fifteen percent from the child support guidelines is not substantial and any deviation of fifteen percent or more from the guidelines is substantial. Modification may be made of such support order without regard to whether the order was issued before, on or after the effective date of this act.' - Robinson v. Robinson, 172 Conn. App. 393, 397-98, 160 A.3d 376 (2017). "Section 46b-215a-1(11) of the Regulations of Connecticut State Agencies defines gross income as the average weekly earned and unearned income from all sources before deductions .... That section includes a nonexhaustive list of twenty-two inclusions. In that list of inclusions is: 'alimony being paid by an individual who is not a party to the support determination.' (Emphasis added.) Regs., Conn. State Agencies § 46b-215a-1(11)(A)(xix). The specific wording of this inclusion makes clear that only alimony received from a nonparty to the support determination is included in gross income." [Internal quotation marks omitted.]
- Valentine v. Valentine, 164 Conn. App. 354, 368-369, 141 A. 3d 884 (2016). "In the present case, the court had before it the parties' financial affidavits, reflecting their net incomes, and it specifically stated that it had considered the 'amount and sources of income,' and had taken 'into account the net income of the parties' in fashioning periodic alimony and child support orders. The court further indicated that its award of $300 per week in child support, retroactive to May 20, 2013, and reduced to $215 per week as of the date the oldest child graduated from high school, June 27, 2014, was 'in accordance with the child support guidelines,' which would have required a consideration of the parties' net incomes. Although the court made passing references to the parties' gross incomes, it never stated that it was relying solely on their gross incomes. Faciallly, the court's consideration of alimony and child support included evidence of the parties' net incomes. The court was not required to make explicit findings as to net income. See Hughes v. Hughes, 95 Conn. App. 200, 207–208, 895 A.2d 274, cert. denied, 280 Conn. 902, 907 A.2d 90 (2006)."

- Mingo v. Blake, Superior Court, Judicial District of Hartford at Hartford, No. HHD-FA15-4077658-S (January 22, 2016) (61 Conn. L. Rptr. 714) (2016 WL 572028) (2016 Conn. Super. LEXIS 149). "General Statutes § 46b-215e governs a court's authority to impose a current child support order upon an incarcerated obligor. Although § 46b-215e does not explicitly define the phrase 'substantial assets,' the statute indicates that 'an initial order for current support [shall be] ... based upon the obligor's ... substantial assets, if any, in accordance with the child support guidelines established pursuant to section 46b-215a.' (Emphasis added.) Thus, the plain language of the governing statute directs a court to consider the child support guidelines when imposing a current order of child support upon an incarcerated obligor." (p. 715)

"The court concludes that the pending personal injury claim of the defendant was properly considered an asset by the FSM. And while the claim was unliquidated and the precise value undetermined at the time of the hearing, there was ample evidence from which he could properly conclude that the asset was 'substantial.'" (p. 716)

- Hendricks v. Haydu, 160 Conn. App. 103, 112-113, 124 A.3d 554 (2015). "The guidelines also permit courts, in appropriate cases, to enter 'a supplemental order ... to pay a percentage of a future lump sum payment, such as a bonus. Such supplemental orders may be entered only when: (i) such payment is of an indeterminate amount; and (ii) the percentage is generally consistent with the [guidelines] schedule....' Regs., Conn. State Agencies § 46b-215a-2b (c)(1)(B). - Tanzman v. Meurer, 309 Conn. 105, 113-114, 70 A.3d 13 (2013). "It is well established that the trial court may under appropriate circumstances in a marital dissolution proceeding base financial awards [pursuant to General Statutes §§ 46b-82 (a) 3 and 46b-86] on the earning capacity of the parties rather than on actual earned income. Lucy v. Lucy, 183 Conn. 230, 234, 439 A.2d 302 (1981). Weinstein*, 280 Conn. 764, 772, 911 A.2d 1077 (2007). - Maturo v. Maturo, 296 Conn. 80, 106, 995 A.2d 1 (2010). "...when there is a proven, routine consistency in annual bonus income, as when a bonus is based on an established percentage of a party's steady income, an additional award of child support that represents a percentage of the net cash bonus also may be appropriate if justified by the needs of the child. When there is a history of wildly fluctuating bonuses, however, or a reasonable expectation that future bonuses will vary substantially, as in the present case, an award based on a fixed percentage of the net cash bonus is impermissible unless it can be linked to the child's characteristics and demonstrated needs."

Section 3: Modification of Child Custody

A Guide to Resources in the Law Library

SCOPE: Bibliographic resources relating to the authority, grounds and procedures for modification of court orders relating to custody of minor children.

DEFINITION:

- Modification: "means a child custody determination that changes, replaces, supersedes or is otherwise made after a previous determination concerning the same child, whether or not it is made by the court that made the prior custody determination." Conn. Gen. Stat. § 46b-115a \(11\) (2023).
- "...[T]here is an important distinction to be drawn between motions to modify custody, which generally require a material change in circumstances; see Clougherty v. Clougherty, supra, 162 Conn. App. at 868, 133 A.3d 886; and motions to modify visitation alone, which do not require a material change. Balaska v. Balaska, 130 Conn. App. 510, 515-16, 25 A.3d 680 (2011); Szczerkowski v. Karmelowicz, 60 Conn. App. 429, 433, 759 A.2d 1050 (2000)." Petrov v. Gueorguieva, 167 Conn. App. 505, 522 n16, 146 A.3d 26, 38 (2016). (Emphasis added.)
- "We repeat: not every change in circumstances is material; and not every material change in circumstances necessarily affects the best interests of the child. To conclude otherwise would be to encourage microscopic analysis of every decision made by a custodial parent in circumstances such as these." Clougherty v. Clougherty, 162 Conn. App. 857, 873, 133 A.3d 886, cert. denied, 320 Conn. 932, 134 A.3d 621 (2016). (Emphasis added.)

- Swanson v. Perez-Swanson, 206 Conn. App. 266, 273-74, 259 A.3d 39 (2021). "Here, although the defendant conceded that the children had continuously resided in North Carolina for more than six consecutive months with the defendant and, therefore, that North Carolina was the children's home state, that alone is not sufficient to terminate the Connecticut court's continuing jurisdiction. As provided in § 46b-115/ (a), a court of this state has continuing jurisdiction over the custody order until it has been determined that Connecticut is not the home state of the children, and that the children lack a significant relationship with the defendant who resides in Connecticut, and that substantial evidence concerning the children's care, protection, training, and personal relationships is no longer available in Connecticut. Thus, all three of the aforementioned factors must be met and, here, the court made its determination on the basis of only one factor without addressing the remaining factors. Because the court based its determination that it lacked jurisdiction solely on the fact that Connecticut is no longer the home state of the children, it erred in granting the plaintiff's motion to dismiss the defendant's motion to modify custody."
- Tannenbaum v. Tannenbaum, 208 Conn. App. 16, 25-26, 263 A.3d 998 (2021). "To determine if the court's 2019 order was a clarification of the 2018 order, rather than an alteration or modification, we begin by 'examining the definitions of both alteration and clarification. An alteration is defined as [a] change of a thing from one form or state to another; making a thing different from what it was without destroying its identity. . . . An alteration is an act done upon the instrument by which its meaning or language is changed. If what is written upon or erased from the instrument has no tendency to produce this result, or to mislead any person, it is not an alteration. . . . Similarly, a modification is defined as [a] change; an alteration or amendment which introduces new elements into the details or cancels some of them, but leaves the general purpose and effect of the subject-matter intact. . . . Conversely, to clarify something means to free it from confusion. . . . Thus, the purpose of a clarification is to take a prior statement, decision or order and make it easier to understand.' (Citations omitted; emphasis added; internal quotation marks omitted.) Perry v. Perry, supra, 130 Conn. App. 725-26. On the basis of our thorough review of the record and the language and context of the orders, we conclude that the court clarified, rather than modified, the 2018 order."
- Weaver v. Sena, 199 Conn. App. 852, 857-858, 238 A.3d 103 (2020). "General Statutes § 46b-56 provides trial courts with the statutory authority to modify an order of custody or visitation. When making that determination, however, a court must satisfy two requirements. First, modification of a custody award must be based upon [inter alia] a material change [in] circumstances which alters the court's finding of the best interests of the child.... Second, the court shall consider the best interests of the child and in doing so may consider several factors.... Before a court may modify a custody order, it must find that there has been a material change in circumstances since the prior order of the court, but the ultimate test is the best interests of the child.... These requirements are based on the interest in finality of judgments ... and the family's need for stability.... The burden of proving a change to be in the best interest of the child rests on the party seeking the change...."

- Merkel v. Hill, 189 Conn. App. 779, 785–86, 207 A.3d 1115 (2019). "On appeal, the defendant claims that the court improperly modified the existing orders relating to custody and the parental access plan. In support of her claim, the defendant first argues that the court violated her right to procedural due process under the United States constitution because it modified the existing custody order without any notice and after a hearing at which it repeatedly was confirmed that the only issue was the modification of the parental access plan. Second, she argues that the court abused its discretion by adopting the recommendations contained in the report because Fraser specifically testified that the report was outdated and that her recommendations contained therein were not current. We agree."
- Kyle S. v. Jayne K., 182 Conn. App. 353, 371–72, 190 A.3d 68 (2018). "It is well settled authority that [n]o court in this state can delegate its judicial authority to any person serving the court in a nonjudicial function. The court may seek the advice and heed the recommendation contained in the reports of persons engaged by the court to assist it, but in no event may such a nonjudicial entity bind the judicial authority to enter any order or judgment so advised or recommended.... A court improperly delegates its judicial authority to [a nonjudicial entity] when that person is given authority to issue orders that affect the parties or the children. Such orders are part of a judicial function that can be done only by one clothed with judicial authority.' (Citation omitted; internal quotation marks omitted.) Keenan v. Casillo, 149 Conn. App. 642, 660, 89 A.3d 912, cert. denied, 312 Conn. 910, 93 A.3d 594 (2014);"
- Lugo v. Lugo, 176 Conn. App. 149, 154–55, 168 A.3d 592 (2017). "In the circumstances of this case, we cannot conclude that the court erred in granting the plaintiff sole legal custody. Significant case law supports the plaintiff's position on appeal. In Kidwell v. Calderon, 98 Conn. App. 754, 911 A.2d 342 (2006), the plaintiff had filed a custody complaint seeking joint legal custody and '[a]ny further orders that the [c]ourt in law or equity deems necessary.' Id., at 755, 911 A.2d 342. The trial court awarded the plaintiff sole custody. The defendant argued to this court that 'because the plaintiff did not specifically ask for sole custody in his complaint or file a motion seeking sole custody, the court abused its discretion in granting him sole custody.' Id., at 757, 911 A.2d 342. This court disagreed. Due process requirements of notice and reasonable opportunity to be heard had been satisfied; the defendant had adequate notice. Id., at 758-59, 911 A.2d 342. Although the complaint had not requested the specific relief of sole custody, the requested relief was broadly stated and, in the circumstances of that case, the court properly considered the best interests of the child."

- Ward v. Ward, Superior Court, Judicial District of Stamford-Norwalk at Stamford, No. FA104018922S (August 16, 2016) (2016 Conn. Super. Lexis 2212) (2016 WL 5173364). "The defendant's motion for modification of custody requests that he be awarded sole legal and primary physical custody of the children. It also seeks other relief. He alleges that the current custody orders are no longer in the best interests of the children. The court disagrees. The problem does not lie in the terms and conditions of the current court orders that were carefully crafted by a highly skilled guardian ad litem, and agreed upon by the parties five years ago. The current predicament is due to each party's failure to strictly adhere to the detailed and well-crafted provisions contained in the parenting plan. The court does not find that a modification of the parenting plan, in the manner suggested by the defendant, would serve the children's best interests."
- Petrov v. Gueorguieva, 167 Conn. App. 505, 514-515 (2016). "We note that the requirements for what the court may permissibly decide or order on pleadings involving custody matters historically have been much less circumscribed than in other types of actions . . . Even in the context of child custody proceedings, however, the pleadings play an important role in providing notice as to the claims before the court. See Strohmeyer v. Strohmeyer, 183 Conn. 353, 354-56, 439 A.2d 367 (1981) (reversing decision granting parents joint custody without further hearing where mother sought sole custody, father did not contest request for sole custody in pleadings or at trial, and court suggested at trial that it would give sole custody to mother). In exercising its statutory authority to inquire into the best interests of the child, the court cannot sua sponte decide a matter that has not been put in issue, either by the parties or by the court itself. Rather, it 'must ... exercise that authority in a manner consistent with the due process requirements of fair notice and reasonable opportunity to be heard. Without a hearing, a trial court may not adjudicate a question of such vital importance to the parties, and one so inherently fact-bound in its resolution. Before a parent is permanently deprived of legal custody, or any change is made therein, the usual and ordinary procedures of a proper and orderly hearing must be observed.' Id., at 356, 439 A.2d 367."

- Daddio v. O'Bara, 97 Conn. App. 286, 292-293, 904 A.2d 259, 263 (2006). "To obtain a modification, the moving party must demonstrate that circumstances have changed since the last court order such that it would be unjust or inequitable to hold either party to it. Because the establishment of changed circumstances is a condition precedent to a party's relief, it is pertinent for the trial court to inquire as to what, if any, new circumstance warrants a modification of the existing order. In making such an inquiry, the trial court's discretion is essential. The power of the trial court to modify the existing order does not, however, include the power to retry issues already decided.... Rather, the trial court's discretion only includes the power to adapt the order to some distinct and definite change in the circumstances or conditions of the parties.' (Citation omitted; emphasis added; internal quotation marks omitted.) Kelly v. Kelly, 54 Conn. App. 50, 55-56, 732 A.2d 808 (1999); see also Hall v. Hall, 186 Conn. 118, 122, 439 A.2d 447 (1982); Bretherton v. Bretherton, 72 Conn. App. 528, 543, 805 A.2d 766 (2002)."
- Hima v. Foronda, Superior Court, Judicial District of Fairfield at Bridgeport, No. FA980352612S, (Jan. 3, 2003) (33 Conn. L. Rptr. 650) (2003 WL 231644) (2003 Conn. Super. LEXIS 76). "The plaintiff's purported loss of income is attributable solely to his careless spending habits and his speculative investments. Although the plaintiff is entitled to gamble on stocks as well as lottery tickets and certainly can spend his money as he chooses, this court should not require his former wife and children to subsidize those choices. He cannot seek to enjoy the benefits of those changes at the expense of his support obligation. One cannot spend $80,000 for vacations, $100,000 for a pool and $50,000 for landscaping but complain about a $26,000 child support obligation. The cash he keeps at his home is nearly enough to pay an entire yearly obligation. Although the plaintiff does have higher expenses than those that existed at the time of the last modification, most of those expenses involve court ordered child support and insurance as well as educational expenses for himself and the child of his present marriage.

One cannot provide homes for his parents, sister-in-law and mother-in-law yet complain about the cost of his children's health insurance. Because the reduction in income is the result of voluntary decisions, the plaintiff's request must be denied."

Karmelowicz, supra, at 432, 759 A.2d 1050 ('[w]hen a court rules on a motion to modify visitation, it is statutorily incumbent on the court that its order be guided by the best interest of the child standard'). Accordingly, the court's alleged failure to find a substantial change in circumstances did not render its order modifying visitation improper."

- McGinty v. McGinty, 66 Conn. App. 35, 40, 783 A.2d 1170 (2001). "In Szczerkowski, as here, the defendant claimed that the court abused its discretion by modifying a visitation order without finding that there was a substantial change in circumstances... We concluded that when considering motions to modify visitation, the court's should apply the best interest of the child standard."
- Szczerkowski v. Karmelowicz, 60 Conn. App. 429, 433, 759 A.2d 1050 (2000). "The defendant cites no case, and our independent research discloses none, that requires a court ruling on a motion to modify visitation to find as a threshold matter that a change of circumstances has occurred. Rather, the standard the court applies is that of the best interest of the child."
- Kioukis v. Kioukis, 185 Conn. 249, 440 A.2d 894 (1981). At the time of the action to modify visitation Connecticut was not the "home state" of the child and therefore lacked jurisdiction to grant a modification.

Table 3: Request for Leave May Be Ordered to File Motion to Modify

| Request for Leave JD-FM-202 Rev. 8-07 |   |
|--|---|
| Conn. Practice Book § 25-26 (2024)  | (g) Upon or after entry of judgment of a dissolution of marriage, dissolution of civil union, legal separation or annulment, or upon or after entry of a judgment or final order of custody and/or visitation for a petition or petitions filed pursuant to Section 25-3 and/or Section 25-4, the judicial authority may order that any further motion for modification of a final custody or visitation order shall be appended with a request for leave to file such motion and shall conform to the requirements of subsection (e) of this section. The specific factual and legal basis for the claimed modification shall be sworn to by the moving party or other person having personal knowledge of the facts recited therein. If no objection to the request has been filed by any party within ten days of the date of service of such request on the other party, the request for leave may be determined by the judicial authority with or without hearing. If an objection is filed, the request shall be placed on the next short calendar, unless the judicial authority otherwise directs. At such hearing, the moving party must demonstrate probable cause that grounds exist for the motion to be granted. If the judicial authority grants the request for leave, at any time during the pendency of such a motion to modify, the judicial authority may determine whether discovery or a study or evaluation pursuant to Section 25-60 shall be permitted. (Emphasis added.) (Adopted June 29, 2007; Effective October 1, 2007.) |
| History  | HISTORY—2008: Prior to 2008, the first sentence of subsection (g) read: “Any motion for modification of a final custody or visitation order or a parental responsibility plan shall be appended to a request for leave to file such motion and shall conform to the requirements of subsection (e) of this section.”   |
| Official Commentary  | COMMENTARY—2008: The above change establishes that the procedure outlined in subsection (g) is no longer required in every case. Upon or after the entry of judgment of a dissolution of marriage, dissolution of civil union, legal or final order of custody and/or visitation for a petition or petitions filed pursuant to Section 25-3 and/or Section 25-4, the judicial authority may order that a party seeking to modify a final custody or visitation order must file a request for leave to do so accompanied by an affidavit setting forth the factual and legal basis for the modifications.  |
